the Negro publishing concerns established, operated and owned by the different denominations of the race is the National Baptist, Sunday School Lesson Commentary, a book, a treatise, a complete exegesis, on the Sunday-school lessons for 1909, published by the National Baptist Publishing Board, at Nashville, Tenn. The book this year contains over four hundred pages and is easily the superior of any of its predecessors. The book is in its fifth volume, and it seems that the Baptist Publishing Board doubled its energy this year in its effort to make this book just what the Sunday-school superintendent, teachers and advanced scholars need, a complete, suggestive, illustrative and comprehensive Commentary on the Sunday-school lessons. Not only this, but it is evident that the ministers of the Gospel. It has the book is of invaluable service to be used more than once, to aid in the preparation of sermons because of the facts and the extra amount of biblical research to be found within its pages. The book contains a preface, an article on Sunday-school Methods; an introduction for each quarter and an introduction for every lesson, together with the Exposition. Following these there come "Truths Gleaned from the Lesson," "Hints for the Primary teachers," and an array of questions upon each lesson. There are three beautifully colored maps showing Paul's journeys. Nearly every lesson for the year is illustrated. Attention is at once attracted to a particular lesson in next year, the one which comes on March 7, subject: "Philip and the Ethiopian," which is illustrated on Page 82 showing Philip and the Ethiopian enuch as they ride in a chariot drawn by two horses. One almost sees the Ethiopian pointing to the water and asking why he cannot be baptized. This is the first time that Negro publishers have attempted to portray in their Sunday-school lessons the Ethiopian in a dark skin. This book has for its editor, Rev. R. H. Boyd, D. D., L. L. D., and as an associate editor, Rev. W. S. Ellington, B. A., D. D. They seem to have wonderfully outstripped the times and have evidently commended themselves to the Sunday-school.

There are many colored folks who talk race pride because it is popular among members of their own race, but they never practice it. There are many of these lying hypocrites in Dallas who have never read an issue of the Dallas Express, but will have their subscriptions paid in advance for some white paper when they die. God save the marks!
